AEA Recognizes Members for Training Commitment

Avionics Training Excellence Awards Presented to 81 AEA Member Shops This Year

DALLAS, TEXAS — The Aircraft Electronics Association announced the recipients of the annual Avionics Training Excellence Awards during this morning's official opening of the 52nd annual AEA International Convention & Trade Show in Dallas, Texas. The Avionics Training Excellence Awards recognize AEA members for their total commitment to training as evidenced by participation in AEA-approved training.

A total of 81 AEA member companies received the 2009 AEA Avionics Training Excellence Award during today's announcement.

Mike Adamson, vice president of member programs and education for AEA, said the membership's commitment to training is stronger than ever.

"We are seeing more and more member shops use AEA products and partnerships as the cornerstone of their training programs," Adamson said. "This level of participation is impetus to continue developing and delivering relevant regulatory and technical training content for the general aviation aircraft electronics community."
